CapBridge Unlocks Access to Tokenised Money Market Fund sgBENJI with Franklin Templeton

CapBridge, a licensed one-stop digital investment platform and a member of FOMO Group, has announced a collaboration with Franklin Templeton, the world's leading global investment firm, to provide regulated access to sgBENJI, the firm's tokenised money market fund. This partnership underscores CapBridge's commitment to broadening compliant access to digital investment products.

Issued on the Stellar blockchain, sgBENJI forms part of Franklin Templeton's initiative to bring more investment offerings into the digital asset ecosystem through tokenisation. The fund provides investors with regulated exposure to high-quality, low-risk assets through a blockchain-based structure. Through CapBridge's regulated platform, investors can access the fund efficiently and securely, meeting demand for transparent and compliant access to tokenised real-world investments.

"At CapBridge, we are committed to enabling secure, compliant access to a broad range of institutional-grade investment opportunities, including tokenised assets," said Janet Liu, CEO of CapBridge. "Our collaboration with Franklin Templeton to offer access to sgBENJI reflects our continued efforts to bridge traditional finance and digital innovation under regulatory oversight, while delivering greater efficiency and transparency for investors."

Looking ahead, CapBridge will continue to support the integration of traditional finance and digital innovation through regulated, accessible investment solutions tailored to the evolving needs of modern investors.

As a member of FOMO Group, CapBridge will participate in the Singapore FinTech Festival (SFF) 2025 to showcase its latest innovations and engage with the global fintech community.
